Personal Property and the Person of the Pers

TUESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 4, 1859. THE LATE LORD SEYMOUR. One of the best-known Englishmen in Paris, Lord Seymour, brother of Lord Hertford, has just died in Paris, rather unexpectedly, at the age of 54, of an attack of gout. He was a man remarkable in more than one respect, but, above all, for his great and almost unique skill in handling sword and pistol, for which reason his friends had nicknamed him the Chevalier de Saint George. In this youth he was of herculean strength of body, and as he was sent over to Paris early, for the purposes of education, and in the circles to which he was recommended, men of equal muscular force were very rare (then the same as they are now), he soon got into the habit of making nocturnal excursions, and trying "rounds with hall porters, Savoyards, and watercarriers. Many are the stories still affoat about the noble Lord and his prowess; among others, of how he put seven policemen, who tried to interfere with his amusements, into a big tub, and set a greengrocer's stall, from the Marche des Innocents, on the top of it; and how, another time, he floored a whole regiment of commissionaires, who attracted by his name, had come expressly to his residence to try "le box." But perhaps the following is the best anecdote connected with the late Lord, though not showing his strength, but his ever-ready wit:- About the year 1835 or 1836 there was one evening a great ball at the house of Baron Rothschild, in the Rue Lafitte, and the string of carriages containing the invited guests was of such a length as to fill all the adjoining streets, among them the Rue Lepelletier, where the Opera is situated. Thus it happened that my Lord Leymour, issuing with his friends from the Maison d'Or, where they had just had their dinner, and ready to enter the Opera, suddenly found his way interrupted. He waited one, two, three minutes; but the file of carriages keeping on increasing, he sud-denly bethought himself of ending the time of expectation, by seeking a new road to the theatre. Opening the door of the biggest and most stately-looking carriage, he made a profound bow to its inmates, and clearing the space above their kness in one jump, he, again profoundly bowing, made his exit as before. The example of my Lord was infecting. First his friends, then the bystanders, who had been waiting some time, then the idlers about the streets, then the newsman with their papers, and the butcher boys with their trays-all made their way in rapid succession through the gilded carriage, till at length its inside looked like a public thoroughfare. All the while the owner of the carriage, a German baron, and accredited ambassador of one of the most important members of the Confederation-had been reclining in his seat, at the side of his better half, in speechless astonishment. That a revolution had suddenly broken out in Paristhat the mob was storming the houses, and forming barricades of all the vehicles, was the first thought entering his mind, and, fat and helpless as he was, he already began giving himself up for lost. Great therefore, was his rage, when at length the true cause of the invasion of his carriage was made clear to him. Burning with anger he at once ordered the coachman to drive to the French passports, for what he imagined to be a pub-only after an investigation had been made, in which it was found that Lord Seymour was the sinner, and after it had been shown to His Excellency that if his State should have to attack England at the same time, on subject, that he allowed himself at length to be pacified. It may be imagined Lord Seymour, in his latter days, gave up amusements of this kind; but he continued not the less an ardent admirer of games, field sports, and o her manly exercises. He was one of the founders of the Jockey Club, and did a good deal towards the improvement of the breed of horses, a science very little understood in

A recent paper, published by order of the House of Commons, gives some interesting particulars respecting the national debt of Great Britain. It covers the whole period of this institution-for such it seems to befrom 1693 to the present time. The two extremes present these figures: In 1694, the ver after the debt originated, the funded debt was £1,200,000, and in 1858-9 the funded debt of Great Britian and Ireland amounted to £786,801,154. The interest on the former was £413,407, and on the latter £27,-743, 215. The unfunded debt at the former period was about five and a half millions sterling, and is at present somewhat over eighteen and a quarter millions. In round numbers, therefore, the present national debt of Great Britain is £805,000,000, or $1,025,000,000, paying over $138,000,000 interest. Great as this debt is it has been larger. At the close of the Napoleonic wars in 1815, it reached the almost incomprehensible sum £860,000,000.

The history of the British national debt is substantially the history of British wars .-The Times in speaking of the accumulation of the debt, truly says: "There is war, and it immediately stirs; there is peace, and it stops; there is war, and it goes on again."-Thus the first war with France, after the beginning of the debt, added twenty thousand pounds; and the war with Spain at the beginning of the last century, put on twenty thousand pounds more. The American war found the debt at £130,000,000 and left it at £240,000,000 -- so much money thrown away. All these additions were trifles compared with that which accrued from the wars with France at the close of the last and the beginning of the present centuries, and which nearly quadrupled the last mentioned figures. But say the British writers, if the country surmounted and reduced the enormous debt of 1815 when manufactures and commerce were in their infancy, the present aspect of the matter, of course, affords no ground of apprehension, but rather of confidence and

CAPITAL OVER 350,000 DOLLARS, AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING. The Charter of this Company offers more favora-ble advantages to the farmer and others, than any Company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves one-eighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay; or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the in-sured saves nearly one-half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of the CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE.

This Company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 13th day of March, 1854, since which time over seven thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over seventy thousand dollars have been paid for losses. Having increased our business during the past year, we fee grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering pros-pects of future usefulness. The Directors hope nd believe, that, by prudence, caution, and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety not surpassed by any Company in the U. have been published in reference to Protestantism in general, yet there is none among them which fully meets the pretensions of that particular form of Protestantism, known in England as Anglicanism, and in this country as Episcopalianism. As this system differs in many respects from other forms of Protestantism, and as it is professed by a large and influential body in this country, its peculiar assumptions require a special examina-tion and discussion from the Catholic Polemic. The work now offered to the public is designed to supply this desideratum.
